Detailed Description

Detailed Description

... assistance of a human sales clerk. Indeed, in the context of grocery shopping, the customer removes one or more grocery items from an aisle of a supermarket, places the grocery item (s) into a shopping cart, basket, or the like, and transports the grocery item (s) to a checkout station for sales clerk-assisted purchase of the item(s). The...

...substance.

As another drawback of these customer-operated checkout stations, the customer is forced to remove the items to be purchased from the basket, shopping cart, or the like, to weigh them and then undesirably undertake to reload the basket/shopping...item is also preferably subtracted from a total tally of the prices of all selected items. Accordingly, the item may be removed from the shopping cart 80 and returned to a shelving unit (e.g., 2 1 a-e) or other...

...82 may be appropriate. If it is determined that a tag is present, the tagged item may be removed from the shopping cart 80 so that the tag can be deactivated.

Further, if it is determined that a...

... container's cells, addresses of the storage cart's sections, or ID numbers of the purchase pick-up sections.

When a purchase basket is removed from a container and placed on a storage cart, the storage address of the purchase basket is changed to update its location. Also, the storage address of the purchase basket is changed when it is removed from the storage cart and placed on the assigned purchase pick-up section. The purchase...

... this number is arbitrary and configurable based upon the application environment of the invention.

Processing Block 570: implement Recommendations
When the customer adds an item to their shopping basket, the recommendation files are accessed to retrieve the compiled recommendations from the - 12 stored files...stored for later recall during the shopping experience of an on-line purchaser.

Finally, processing block 830 is executed so that, whenever each on-line purchaser adds a "latest" item to the shopping cart, the file of "nearest" items determined by processing block 820 is accessed to provide a recommendation of items "nearest" to the item added to the shopping cart. (Of course it is possible to return the "nearest" items to the purchaser at other points in the shopping experience, not just at the time...

...900 does not require storing a file of conceptual similarity among textual items.

I Processing block 910 applies, whenever the on-line purchaser adds a "latest" item to the shopping cart, a latent semantic algorithm is applied to the item's to - 25 determine a conceptual similarity among the items and the "latest" item. It...

...based on the conceptual similarity between the "latest" item and all of the items.

Processing block 920 is then executed so that a recommendation of items 46nearestf' to the item added to the shopping cart is generated. (Of course it is possible to return the "nearest" items to the purchaser at other points in the shopping experience, not just at the time...

If the customer (in block 378) does not desire to move an item to a shopping cart, the system determines whether the user wants to move an item(s) to one or more different wish lists (block 384). If not, the system returns to block 374; otherwise, the system proceeds to block...

...more of the items from the

scan list (block 400). The system, in block 402, determines whether the user wants to move the selected item(s) to a shopping cart. If so, the user is prompted, in block 404, to enter the quantity of each item to be added to the shopping cart. As indicated in block 408, the system then removes those item(s) from the scan list. Next, the system adds the desired number of item(s) to the user's shopping cart (i.e., to database 410) (block 405). The system then returns to block 396. If the user indicated, in block 402...block 424.

FIG. 17 describes what happens when a user selects a certain number of items from his/her wish list to be added to the user's shopping cart (block 440). In one embodiment, the user, in block 442, checks-out online (i.e., proceeds to purchase the items in the user's electronic shopping cart) by, for example, clicking an icon representing a shopping cart. The system then receives the order (block 444). In block 446, the system decrements the number of items from the selected wish list by the...

...items to be purchased from that wish list (block 452). The system then returns to block 446.

FIGS. 18a-b describe what happens when the user has selected items to purchase online and desires to review his/her shopping cart (block 454). In block 456, the system displays the prosumer purchase module. The system then displays for the user a description of the items in the user's electronic shopping cart along with the status of the items (e.g., available, sold out, backordered) (block 458). The status of the items is retrieved from database 410 which includes the...

...in real-time, hourly, daily, etc. The system next determines whether the user wants to remove one or more items from the list of items in the shopping cart (block 460). If so, the system proceeds to block 462 where the customer selects the item(s) to be removed from the shopping cart. Then, the item(s) are removed from the shopping cart (block 464) and database 410 is updated. The system then returns to block 458.

If in block 460 the user chose not to remove any items from the shopping cart , the system proceeds to block 472 where the system determines whether the user wants to change the quantity of any of the items in the shopping cart . If not, the customer 15 selects the items to be purchased (block 474). In one embodiment, the system assumes the user wants to purchase all of the items in the shopping cart , unless the quantity of an item is zero (block 480). The system then proceeds to block 482 (described below with reference to FIG. 21 a).

If the system determines, in block 472, that the user wants to change the quantity of any of the items in the shopping cart , the system proceeds to block 476 where the user is permitted to enter a new quantity for one or more...order can be fulfilled (block 538).

Referring to FIG. 21 a, the system proceeds from block 482 (the buyer has selected items to purchase by including certain items in his/her shopping cart) to 540 where the system displays the shopping cart check - out module. The system determines whether the buyer wishes to gift wrap one or more of the items in the shopping cart (block 544). If not, the system proceeds to block 550. Otherwise, in block 546, the buyer selects which item(s) should be wrapped. Next...

...of the recipient (block 553). The address information is stored to database 410. In block 554, the system determines whether there are any additional items in the shopping cart that do not ...to block 982. If not, the user can use additional functionality provided by the PDA (block 1008) such as, for example, deleting, moving and copying items between all existing wish lists, scan lists and shopping cart lists (block 1010). Then, the user proceeds to the kiosk where the PDA cradle or lily pad...or more items in the user's shopping cart. If so, the system proceeds with order fulfillment by displaying a list of items in the user's shopping cart (block 1088). The user then selects one or more of these items to purchase (block 1090). Otherwise, if the user does not want to make a purchase , all 51 the items will continue to reside in the user's shopping cart (block 1086). The user can thereafter add one or more of these items to a wish list and/or purchase one or more of these items at a...Next, the user receives a receipt to confirm purchase of the items (block 1146).

From block 1146 or from block 1134 (if the user did not place an item in the "buy now" shopping cart), the system proceeds to block 1138 where the system communicates the purchase request to an order fulfillment module that fulfills the order. This communication may occur, for...

... to purchase additional items, delete items or return to shopping.

If the user elects to remove one or more item(s) from their virtual shopping cart in step 456, the user does so by selecting the item(s) in the display of the shopping cart contents, and pressing a remove button or click area. In step 458, the item is removed from the virtual shopping cart for the selected item. Processing then returns to step 454 to display the shopping cart contents which will now not include the deleted item(s).

If the user wishes to continue to shop after viewing the contents of the...will be noted that a substantial time delay may occur between the display of an item to the consumer and its addition to a virtual shopping cart, and the decision by a consumer to purchase that item. Indeed, a consumer may leave an item in their virtual shopping cart for a number of days, before that shopping cart record is removed. Thus, it is necessary to determine whether items that were available and selected for purchase by the consumer are still available after the...page of the catalog is displayed. An alternative option that may be available is to remove items from the virtual shopping cart. If the user selects one or more items and presses a remove button or click area in step 516, then in step 518 the shopping cart records for the selected item are deleted from the purchase and shopping cart information record in server 12.

Processing then returns to step 512 to display the remaining...
